ENGAGEMENT OF ORCHESTRA IS BIG EVENT

Arrangements Are All Made for Appearance of Russian Organization Here.

Howard C. Robey, business representative of the Russian Symphony Orchestra, numbering eighty-five artists, has just spent a day in the city completing negotiations with the management of the Grand for the appearance of the orchestra at one performance, a matinee, for the latter part of November.

A subscription sale of seats will be held on or about November 1 at the theater.

This organization coming to Clarksburg intact and direct from the Pittsburgh Exposition, the Mendelssohn Choir Festival, Toronto, the Cecelia Choral Society, of Montreal, and it plays six days between Quebec, P. Q., Canada, and Norfolk, Va., where they play nine concerts for the Virginia Choral Society. Clarksburg has been included in the itinerary for a matinee only as the organization will use its own special train to appear at Marietta on the same night.

In the event this venture of the Grand management proves financially successful the Russian Symphony Orchestra will be seen in Clarksburg the following season.

The people of Clarksburg are to be congratulated that such a wonderful organization of international artists will be brought to their doors, and that they will not be compelled to visit Pittsburgh or the Metropolitan opera house, New York City, to hear this splendid array of world famous musicians.

FREIGHT CONDUCTOR
SERIOUSLY INJURED

J. Wetherel, of Hinton, May Die
from Injuries Received
When Hit by Train

J. Wetherel, of Hinton, a conductor on a Baltimore and Ohio freight train, is in a critical condition in St. Mary's hospital suffering from injuries he received early Tuesday morning when he was struck by a passenger train on the Short Line branch of the road. He is suffering from a severe fractured skull and is badly bruised. He has been unconscious ever since he was injured.

From what can be learned of the affair Wetherel was sleeping in the caboose on the train when the rapidly approaching fast train awakened him and he jumped off the caboose to see what train it was and landed in front of the train.

Fellow trainmen and members of the passenger train crew gathered him up and brought him to this city where he was taken to the hospital for treatment.

The fast train which awakened Mr. Wetherel was fast eastbound passenger train, No. 2, due at the local station at 3:52 but which on account of a small freight wreck at Long Run west of Salem, had to be detained around over the Short Line branch.

Mr. Wetherel has been working for the railroad company for the last eight years.

THOMAS HENNEGHAN
REPORTED DROWNED

Clothes Are Found on Ohio River Bank and He Can Not Be Found.

Leaving a fishing camp near Constitution, O., Saturday, for the purpose of going to Marietta to attend to some business, Thomas A. Henneghan disappeared, and when his coat, hat and a collar were found on the river bank near what is known as Constitution Ferry, the conclusion was reached that he had accidentally been drowned.

Friends of the missing man immediately telephoned Marietta, where he had been stopping for some time past, to friends, seeking information as to whether he had arrived there, and upon being told that he had not, started a search for him. The first conclusion was that in some manner he had gone to the river and after divesting himself of his garments, had gone in to take a bath, being overcome by cramps on account of the heat, and there being no one near at the time, had drowned.

Following the news that he had not arrived at Marietta, the friends of Mr. Henneghan at once started to drag the river but on account of there being a large number of logs at the point where his clothes were found, they could not do anything in that way. Later, a large amount of dynamite was secured and set off in the river, but this failed to have any effect to a late hour last night.

James Henneghan, a prominent retired business man, of Stintonsville, who is a brother of the missing man, was notified of the occurrence and he has arranged to have the diver who is located at Ham No. 18, go to the point along the river, where his brother is supposed to have drowned and make a thorough search among the logs and other refuse which is jammed at that point, in an effort to recover the body should it develop that the man was drowned.

Thomas A. Henneghan was well known in Clarksburg. He was for years in the saloon business here and was popular. He originally came from Steubenville, where for many years he was employed in the iron and steel mills of that section of the Ohio valley. During the last month or six weeks he had been spending the summer visiting friends occasionally taking an outing at the various fishing camps along the Ohio and Muskingum rivers. He had been at the camp near Constitution for several days before his disappearance.
